“I couldn’t,” said Bruce when asked what he would do if given the gift. “I’m going to keep it.” “Not many coaches are lucky enough to win a game with all of the big shots they take,” quipped Jarmon. “We want to be able to hold on to the ball for a longer period of time,” added Bruce. “Today’s game made me more aware of the game.” The Jarmon brothers have a long history of sports achievement. Jarmon, a UCLA All-American on the Bruins basketball team in 2013, is one of just two athletes in UCLA history to have a 3,000-point career. The brothers were also part of UCLA’s 2004 and 2012 NCAA Championship teams. Bruce played for the men’s basketball team for all three seasons. In 2014, Jarmon led UCLA in scoring with 12.7 points per game and played a major role in the Bruins' run to the Elite Eight, which included wins over Oregon and UCLA. Jarmon was the only Bruin to record a double-double in both games. The UCLA baseball team will have a very busy weekend, hosting three games to close out the season. The team will close out the season at Arizona State on Friday, followed by a visit to Arizona State on Saturday and a regular season finale vs. Washington State on Sunday. At least two candidates were vying for the Republican nomination for the Nov. 4 election, but the outsider Trump was making headlines on a daily basis. He became the frontrunner, attracting more and more voters, and he was described as a “kingmaker” by pundits. By the time Trump was nominated on the second ballot of the Republican Convention in July, he had sealed the deal. However,
