DirectUpdate

3 Reviews for DirectUpdate 4.0/5 Michael Steinhardt – March 29, 2009 Downloaded this app tonight. I needed to update my dynamic dns address. I tried doing it manually but couldn't. The settings could have been a little more user friendly. When I ran it it informed me that the default settings were used and everything was working. It didn't have any error messages in windows. Once it finished it suggested that it run every five minutes. I put it to 5 minutes in the configuration screen and it started right away. It was nice that I don't need to restart my system and there are no errors. It is very efficient. 5.0/5 Great product 5.0/5 – Felix Horacek – May 8, 2011 It is a very good product and I recommend it. The interface is not fluent but it is very functional. It is compatible with all operating systems.Q: How to change the tab width of the tabs in the Google Chrome Developer Tools I'm using a Mac and the Google Chrome Developer Tools. When the tabs are loaded, they seem to have a really wide width. How can I change this width (and the font size, which is also very large)? A: You have the right idea but the tabs are bit difficult to change. The Developer Tools icon on the Mac by default takes you to the devtools.html page in the Developer Tools folder. You then have to go back out of the Developer Tools by double clicking the icon. I'll try to find the correct link for you (it's been a while). If it's available at the time of writing this, the easiest way to change the font size is to go to chrome://settings/content (after clicking the Developer Tools icon at the top right) and open the Appearance tab. There you'll find a Font Size slider. The Roaring Twenties The Roaring Twenties is a 1937 American drama film directed by W. S. Van Dyke and written by F. Hugh Herbert. What's New In DirectUpdate?

DirectUpdate is a tool that can be used to update a dynamic DNS account when your IP changes. So, in case your IP address is often changing, the app will notify you using email or SMS whenever this happens. Notification emails are sent to your registered email address. WARNING: The app is mainly used for downloading software updates for Dynamic DNS accounts Most people are familiar with the term 'auto upgrade'. But there is a type of auto-upgrade which has been going on for decades, but hasn't received its fair share of attention. It's called automatic software deployment. Basically, it's the process by which updates to software are automated. It's a way to increase the efficiency and decrease the cost of software deployment. In other words, it can get rid of the temptation for many administrators to go through all the rigmarole of deploying software manually. Software vendors are taking advantage of this trend to stay abreast of the latest versions of software and make sure that customers have the most up-to-date applications running. Let's take a look at some of the different techniques employed to automatically update software. Some vendors prefer to use automation tools to promote them. Many of these tools automatically download software updates and automatically install them on clients. Some vendors will have an infrastructure built around these tools. When a new version of a software is released, an engineer just needs to take a snapshot of the current server. A tool like this is used to install the new version on a 'master' server. Then, the administrator creates an archive that contains both the current and new version of the software. Then, the master server runs the tool to load the new archive file and deploy it to all the server instances. This can be done silently, so there is no need to notify users. Many vendors use 'Linux groups' for this purpose. In this case, the software is installed on a master server and all updates and upgrades are automatically installed. Then, the Linux group creates an archive of the installation and loads it to all the computers in the group. Many product vendors also use this technique. For example, BigFix Server and the Microsoft Lifecycle Server products are both built around auto-updating and updating software. Another popular tool is Microsoft WSUS. You probably already use this tool. This tool can also work with this method. WSUS uses a method of scheduled updates. This ensures that at scheduled
