Edius 6. 2 requires that the Windows Runtime Library v8.0 or above be installed on your system.About 10,000 North Carolina residents have been evacuated in flooding caused by torrential rain and heavy flooding, after all of the city's sewer systems overflowed during the week-long rainstorm. The 10,000 residents were able to return to their homes Wednesday, but 200 to 500 people remain evacuated, according to NBC News. More than 30 feet of rain fell in a matter of days, most of which dumped on Charlotte and Richmond, N.C. alone, flooding homes and highways, according to the NBC affiliate station WXII. "When the water comes up to my knee, I have to come up and out," resident Arthur Spence told WXII. More than two inches of rain was measured in Charlotte Tuesday, and officials said four to seven inches more were possible in the coming days. "It's normally gone pretty quickly," Charlotte-Mecklenburg police spokesperson Christina Hall said of the rain on Tuesday. "That's one of the problems is it didn't go anywhere." MORE: Flooding from Atlanta to North Carolina Charlotte is only partially drained, and the low point is quickly approaching. In addition, the Queen

City is made up of a collection of small watersheds and storm drains, which are all slowly filling up and bursting, NBC News reports. Water was pumped into train tunnels in Richmond, and crews treated water using extra pumps and borrow pits on homes in the area. "It's been a mess for a couple
