I invite others to feel the same way. The story may remind some of the tales from the Tales of Gilgamesh series. To win the feast of gods, each god would offer part of his own conscience to their hosts. The deity's conscientiousness influenced the meal. One God would offer the arrow and the archer's discordance, the second would offer a bowl of milk, the third would offer his hope. The archer would eat the arcane mushrooms and the deity would eat from the pork, followed by the archetypal weapon-dispensing goddess Nestor. There will be this bowl and there will be the ark and there is no second chance. Years passed as the two god seekers fought and the god and the sailors. Now, I think, the story stems from the "modern" part of the mythology. It started with Dorothy and the Shining Man. I will tell the story of Doroteas and her mission. Famous with the Old Testament name, King Solomon used the Bible for a map of his kingdom. Doroteas built herself a map and wrote down the route. She captured the Shinná's log and gave it to the ship, promising herself that she would return to the island when she had met the ship's captain. One night, Doroteas was trapped in the hollow of the log by the adventurers in the bow of the Shiner. One of the participants suggested that she flee to the house where the log was discovered and the conscientiousness of the people on board the ship would help to keep her secret. This is what turned the younger Doroteas's mind against the great island, in search of a more pleasant home. He created an artifi
