The first thing you will notice about the interface is the lack of a toolbar that usually features more buttons than the main menu. You will find items from the shell menu on the top. The menu-bar gives you access to the following options: Create File Document Edit Search Save View As you can see, Portable Word does not provide you with Microsoft Word's ribbon interface. General: The program provides you with a full screen interface. However, the fonts used in the interface are too small and you might miss the red squiggles for menu commands if you are not careful. Use the control keys to navigate between pages within a document. Press Enter to activate the current page or select other pages with the control key. Create Documents The Create Documents menu gives you access to the Create, Open and Save As options. You can access the file formats directly from the list of files, but you also have the option of creating a new document or using a template. New Document Open Documents Save Documents The Program will automatically save your documents in your default folder unless you specify to save them somewhere else. The Document Editor: Each document is stored as a separate file and contains different sections like header, body and footer. Header Body Footer The navigation toolbar can be hidden by selecting the View 09e8f5149f
