Find out everything you need to know in this FAQ!. Was this information helpful?.The study showed that racism among youths has increased to an alarming extent in South Africa. According to the study, most of the students in the report, which was published in the latest edition of the annual Black Report by Africa Check, believed that racist behaviour should remain a legal principle in society. Although most of the students believed that the curriculum should be more conducive to promoting racial unity, the study showed that most of them were not interested in learning about racial conflict and the history of apartheid. Amongst learners in Grade 8, 76% agreed that black South Africans should remain racially oppressed. The figure stands at 65% amongst the learners of Grade 12. This ranks South Africa as the most racist country in the world, ahead of China, Australia and the United States, among others.

The study notes that the increase in racist behaviour can be attributed to the election of Cyril Ramaphosa as South Africa's president. "Although Ramaphosa has indicated that he is committed to improving race relations, his presidency has been characterised by anti-black rhetoric which has exacerbated racial tensions and violence," the report read. The report also noted that after the onset of democracy in 1994, the proliferation of hate speech and hate crimes have reached "alarming proportions". "Although it has been more than 20 years since the end of apartheid and freedom of expression was recognised in the Constitution, African universities continue to censor academic
