The list of twenty is between twenty-six and thirty-seven, depending on how you count..Q: Why ValueError: lookbehind regex must be something different than '?' The original code that I am trying to run is col = [1,2,3,4,5,6,7,8,9,0] g = '|'.join([re.escape(n) for n in col]) b = re.compile(g) print b And the error that I am getting is: ValueError: lookbehind regex must be something different than '?' A: This is not a regex issue. You have your regular expression inside of a list comprehension. That list is not a valid regular expression. You could write this as a regular expression: g =

'[|'.join(map(re.escape, col)) + '|]' Or you could do it inside the regex, after it is constructed (in the replacement method): g = re.compile(g) g.sub(lambda match: '|'.join(map(re.escape, col)), '[|'.join(map(re.escape, col))) Or you could do it inside your list comprehension: col = [re.escape(n) for n in col] g = '[|'.join(col) Diseases of the Circulatory System 648931e174

. You may need to use a small resealable plastic bag to hold each pair of pieces together. The clutch is easy to use; simply place the bottom layer of the clutch onto your back, the inner plastic insert on top, then position the metal segment on the two plastic segments so it will cover the two, making it a complete tag.
