Field of Invention The present invention relates to an LED lighting device, and in particular, to a portable LED lighting device which is designed to be used for illumination of small or medium-size objects, applicable in the filing and storage of documents. 2. Description of Prior Art Portable illuminators have been developed for lighting small or medium-size objects, including many invented led-light illumination devices and the like. As early as the 1950s and the 1960s, the first types of lighting devices for illuminating objects were developed, with the aid of power generated by internal batteries within the device itself. During later years, the functions of such devices were gradually improved, with the introduction of power switch devices. However, electric power is still limited and the use of a power switch device for a portable illuminator needs to be remembered to turn off the device within a very short period of time. Moreover, the use of internal batteries, which are not especially designed for a long time of service, may weaken the power supply systems within the devices. Further, internal batteries may be too large to be used in a portable, hand-held structure. Additionally, the power switch devices may be prone to wear or failure. In addition, the light bulb of such devices need to be frequently replaced, as such light bulbs are not easily replaceable. Far Cry 5s graphical engine allows for space abstractions at every scale and the team expects to explore new ways to exploit it. Take a second look at Far Cry 5's world. It's made of things, not points. "It all started with [skiing]," Jeff explained. "We're all big snowboarders and skiers. We wanted the game to feel like a ski resort, an après-ski kind of world. We realized

OfflineFarmers and shellfish harvesters are growing increasingly vulnerable to sea lion over-occupation of coastal areas for their primary prey species, sea lions. OPINION: When visiting southern California along the coast, it is easy to take quick snapshots at transient sea lions standing on the ocean beaches, or other people in boats making a living by catching them. However, as land-based fishermen, harvesters or environmental advocates, we've yet to really know much about how these creatures live their lives. There are around 11,500 sea lion pups born in the coastal waters of California each year, with over 90 percent of those pups dying before they have a chance to grow to adulthood. Yet we don't know much about the fate of the pups that do survive, even as they grow into these large, mysterious looking animals. "These aren't just 'average' marine mammals. They're uniquely adaptable, and they're adaptive to human-dominated environments", said Drew Moock, Senior Conservation Biologist and Sea Lion and Otter Program Coordinator at SeaWorld California. READ MORE: * Best pictures of seabirds * Manatees get up close with humans * It's not even March - but Seabirds are already back Watching sea lions is one of the most rewarding experiences you can enjoy on a California coastline, and everyone should get a chance to observe them up close. But looking at them without having a solid understanding of their lives in the wild is like looking at a human body through a window - you only get an incomplete view into their world. Sea lions are remarkably social mammals, which have their own unique culture and dialect within the wild, and are some of the most culturally complex mammals in the animal kingdom. These social interactions play a role in their complex communication, and their unique way of life is built on trusting, reciprocal relationships with other individuals in the community. While sea lions are a strong species and their populations are healthy, they are also relatively new to the California coast. They have only lived in the landscape for the last hundred years, and the influences humans have had on their behaviour

Pages Tuesday, July 28, 2010 The Shakespeare Challenge One of the most popular challenges during the month of August is to read the 15 plays by William Shakespeare. A good way to get started is to follow the checklist of Liz Hurley who reads one of every day for a week. I have done the challenge a few times and maybe I can get into the mood for another go. I do have to dig out some of my old Elizabethan plays though. Of course we can never be out of things to talk about. We were thinking about where we met on the Portuguese side of the border. "Tell us about when you first travelled to Portugal!" My daughter started asking about our memories of Tivoli from when we lived there in the early seventies. Soon we were telling her about the time in the early 80s when my daughter and I went to the Netherlands to visit my grandchildren. We were there for three days and most of the time was spent in my daughter-in-law's kitchen. I make a cheesecake and she makes bread and we come up with several interesting recipes. My dear son who is moving to Virginia was there along with my dear wife who comes for special birthdays. Tivoli was an exciting time for us all. Over the years my daughter and I have done many different things and today we have left on a two week trip through southern Spain. There are highlights along the way but one of my favorite stops is in the province of Almeria.
