"Adjustments were made in line with the planned production profile," the state-owned energy giant said in a statement, declining to comment on the precise reasons for the reduction. It said it expects to maintain its production level above 10 million barrels a day throughout the month. The crown-holding Energy Ministry came under pressure last month to produce a report clarifying the amount of oil Saudi Arabia has in storage at its two strategic oil facilities. Riyadh stores roughly 60% of its crude reserves of about 2 trillion barrels at the Eastern region's Shaybah and Khurais plants. The share of crude in storage will rise to 70% if output was to fall below 10 million barrels a day. The kingdom halted crude exports in January due to a global supply glut, but since restarting exports from the port of Yanbu in May, it has boosted production to about 10.7 million barrels a day. "Production is expected to increase in coming months," Aramco said. The company did not say when production would resume. Aramco shares rallied 20% last month after Saudi Arabia said it would relax rules on banking services for state-owned oil
