The rate of sugar consumption and formation of citric acid in Erwinia carotovora subsp. carotovora 86 were measured during growth on a synthetic medium containing glucose as sole carbon source. The consumption of sugar and the production of citric acid occurred at different rates. Citric acid was rapidly formed during early exponential growth, and sugar consumption began only at the end of the exponential phase. During the late exponential phase, biosynthesis of exopolysaccharide began and citric acid was slowly metabolized. Production of exopolysaccharide occurred simultaneously with the depletion of extracellular glucose and was completed only after the cessation of growth.A Message from the Administration of Franklin Pierce College The Franklin Pierce Institute of Technology announces that it will be phasing out the classes taught by Debra Hammel, who will retire as Dean of the School of Computation and Mathematical Sciences on November 15th, at the end of her 4th year of service with Franklin Pierce. The College administration extends its gratitude to Ms. Hammel, who generously gave her time, talent and creativity to serve the College for the past four years. We wish her well, and look forward to her continued service to the College in other ways. The College will continue to rely on the services of faculty in the School of Computer and Mathematical Sciences and will remain committed to the academic mission of the College.Shahidabad, Aligudarz Shahidabad (, also Romanized as Shāhīdābād; also known 0cc13bf012
