one-liner escaping single and double quote issue I have a simple variable assignment in Perl `my $myVar = "I'm so excited to have a new server! It's the first one I've had for a long time. I'm hoping to get back into the good ways of coding! I tried making a couple of scripts for myself, but then I realized that Perl is the best language to use and that's what I've been doing until now!";` but when I use this one-liner: `perl -i -pe's/("[^"]+")//g' $myVar` it replaces the quotes with `` ``, and my string becomes this: `I'm so excited to have a new server!`

It's the first one I've had for a long time. I'm hoping to get back into the good ways of coding! I tried making a couple of scripts for myself, but then I realized that Perl is the best language to use and that's what I've been doing until now` ` .

When I run this one-liner in perl -v, it prints the following: perl: -e syntax OK Why is it not replacing the double quotes

Anime/Manga Games Sites TV Shows; .1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a system and method for determining whether to transmit a voice message or an audio file. 2. Background of the Invention One problem with voice messaging systems is that they may unnecessarily broadcast messages from third party sources, which may be transmitted simultaneously with a message intended for the person accessing the messaging system. Therefore, the third party message may be heard and potentially cause an undesirable occurrence, while the intended message may be lost. For instance, if the subscriber to the messaging system is driving an automobile and receives a voice message, the message may be heard by a third party in the automobile. Conversely, if the subscriber to the messaging system is not in a vehicle, the subscriber may inadvertently pick up a message intended
