License Plate.BMP signaling regulates the photoreceptor layer organization in the developing zebrafish retina. A molecular pathway known as Bone Morphogenetic Protein (BMP) Signaling is required for maintaining the differentiation of differentiated cells, but few studies have examined its role in neural differentiation. We hypothesized that this pathway is involved in patterning of the retina. Therefore, we used fluorescence imaging and in situ hybridization to investigate the effect of blocking different components of BMP Signaling on retinal differentiation. Through the in situ hybridization data, we identified the expression of specific receptors in the retinal cells. Furthermore, the data from fluorescence imaging analyses suggest that a BMP antagonist and a BMP receptor inhibitor have a subtle effect on retinal differentiation. Through their purchase of AES, Echogain will not only reap financial benefits; it will also gain access to the company's know-how and manpower to help develop the Echog 1cdb36666d
