There are 3 options "Nero Light", "Nero" and "Nero Classic". But I've only the option "Nero". Any ideas? A: I would recommend downloading and installing the Win7 sticker pack. The Aero theme is included in the pack, as I'm sure you will be pleased to know. Here's how to find it: Click Start Type win. Hit Enter. Right-click a blank area of the taskbar and select Open. Right-click the Application button and select View All. In the right-click menu, select Control Panel and choose Select a Hardware or Device. Under the General Tab, click Change settings for my computer. Under System Category, click Display. Click the Hardware Tab and click Change your appearance or click Display Settings. Click the Display Settings button that appears. At the Welcome page, click Aero and then, in the slideshow on the right side of the window, click the Sticker Set tab and click Change the way my computer looks. In the navigation pane on the left side of the window, click to open the "My Aero Themes" folder, and select the Aero folder. Press OK to return to the Welcome page. Click Apply, OK, and then Restart. For the most part, this is a 10-minute procedure. There are some small complications that still appear to remain. My current workaround is to disable the Aero theme for now. You could also install the Windows 7 Ultimate Extras...they would probably just add even more junk to your computer. Both solutions should perform all required tasks without issue. However, I prefer using only the one that performs the simplest function. Q: How does a "code breaks" output of static analysis tools like Smali work? I'm a newbie to Android programming and I'm currently studying some sample codes using a static analyzer which is called Smali. 595f342e71
