The receivers are my app users. I have a single device registered. When I send the message to this device the android app accepts it and the user logs in. Now I press back button which should close the app, but instead it triggers another push notification and more logging. Is there a way I can prevent second login event when the app is closed. If I use 'CANCEL_PENDING' notification type I will get it as per the documentation. But as per the same I cant get the 'CANCEL' option either to prevent multiple push notifications. Any suggestions are very much appreciated. A: When the app is closed a system event is generated that causes a new registration event to be sent to the back-end. If you prevent the new registration from being sent the old registration won't be deleted and you'll be notified again. To prevent the push you can send a special "CANCEL_PENDING" notification. The cancel behavior will be taken care of automatically by the Firebase servers. As a side note, I don't see how your back button would close the app. If you close the app you should receive a notification and that's what you are seeing. It's either a bug in your app or a bug in your app's registration. I press back button which should close the app, but instead it triggers another push notification and more logging. That's expected behavior. When you press back you open a URL intent, you are expected to Zoledronic acid (ZA) is a third-generation nitrogen-containing bisphosphonate which is widely used to prevent bone loss in osteoporosis. It is widely accepted that ATP-binding cassette transporter 1 (ABCA1) plays a crucial role in the efflux of phospholipids and cholesterol from cells to lipid-poor extracellular apolipoprotein A-I (apoA-I). Our aim was to investigate the effect of ABCA1, a transporter of ZA into the plasma, on the pharmacokinetics of ZA in a healthy volunteer study. A randomized, open-label, crossover trial was performed. Thirty healthy volunteers were included in the final analysis. Subjects were classified into two groups according to their ABCA1 genotype and then were randomly assigned to the two treatment groups for a 12-week treatment. After ZA treatment, the ABCA1 genotype groups did not have significant differences in the pharmacokinetic parameters of ZA between the high and low ABCA1 transporter groups. These results suggest that ABCA1 does not affect the pharmacokinetics of ZA in the current study
