Made in USA.Q: java.lang.OutOfMemoryError: PermGen space (on 11.04) I recently upgraded from 11.04 to 11.10. For some reason I was getting java.lang.OutOfMemoryError: PermGen space on my dev machine but not on my production machine. That was perplexing because my production machine was using 64-bit systems and my dev machine was using a 32-bit OS. After checking the logs for the dev server I realized that there were loads of Java threads that were using 10Gb. I went to the Java Control Panel and clicked the Variaables tab and it pointed me to this warning: The number of CPUs has been configured using the -Dsun.maxmemory setting in the JVM, but may be insufficient for optimal or maximum performance. Please consider using a larger value. According to the Google group discussion for this, it suggests that 10Gb is the minimum to reserve for the perm gen. I went back into the Variaables tab and changed the "Maximum perm gen size" to 8100Mb and the warning went away. This is good because I have a 64-bit system. After updating the virtual machine image used for my dev server, I updated to 11.10 and am still getting java.lang.OutOfMemoryError: PermGen space. This is the log file for the OOM that I am getting: FINE: Caught OutOfMemoryError while setting nonglobal class lock. The application may be corrupted. SEVERE: Caught OutOfMemoryError while setting nonglobal class lock. The application may be corrupted. INFO: Shutdown hook called. INFO: Attempt to start service org.apache.tomcat.TomcatEmbedded has failed. INFO: Attempt to start service org.apache.tomcat.TomcatEmbedded has failed 595f342e71
