've only just begun. And yes, I've got some knitting going on too. Of course, I'm not the only one, because we have lost too many seasons for us to sit back and just relax. To sit and bemoan the loss of life as it once was, and wish it was back. I think we're all a little tipsy at this point, but we just have to keep moving, don't we? Like The Walking Dead, we have a little bit of work left to do. I'm not saying that anyone else is immune from Alzheimer's. I'm just one of many people thinking about this disease, and we're all struggling with this. You can think of The Walking Dead as a metaphor for the human condition. Life changes us. We lose people we love. It's all about how we deal with it. When we lose a person, we feel guilty. We feel bad. We don't know how to deal with it. And one thing leads to another, and we become as "un-human" as the zombies. But we haven't, and haven't been, all zombie-like. We've lost our humanity. I think that's what's so scary about Alzheimer's. It's like we've become zombies. Perhaps, with time, we can rebuild it. We can take it on. The more we know, the more we'll know. It's scary, but we're learning. We're trying to figure out the right things to do, how to help ourselves, and others. Our main goal is, I think, to not only survive, but also to cope. This is a disease that I believe can be treated, just as it can be cured. If we're not careful, we'll become sick and die. But if we treat it early enough, if we know it, if we do the right things, we can live long enough to have a life with it. That's the story that I'm trying to tell, and as long as we all work together, I think we can do it. The series The Walking Dead originally aired between 2010 and 2013 and currently airs on AMC. Wayne Palmer is president of the Palmerton Area Chamber of Commerce. If you've already had your deer killed, here are a few tips from your friends in the deer industry to make sure your tax deductions go as far as they can: Make sure you have the harvest tag signed and scanned in
