Generation, migration, and death of neural progenitor cells in the embryonic zebrafish hindbrain. The zebrafish hindbrain is a rapidly maturing structure that is primordial to the three-veined swim bladder. As in the mouse, the proliferative activity of neural progenitor cells in the zebrafish hindbrain largely precedes the end of gastrulation. We have defined the progenitor lineages and migratory dynamics of the zebrafish hindbrain (rhombomeres) in the zebrafish, embryo, and adult by using BrdU labeling, DiI application, in situ hybridization, and fluorescent in situ hybridization. We show that the progenitor cells originate from neural tubes at multiple levels and migrate to different regions of the hindbrain by means of primary and secondary pathways. Furthermore, it takes about 40 hours for progenitor cells located in the rhombomere 1 to complete migration. We report a new observation concerning the distribution of neural progenitor cells in the adult hindbrain. About 5% of the cells are located outside the rhombomere 4 and the red nucleus. Since these progenitor cells were located in an area that contains cells that are positive for some neuronal markers, we suggest that these cells may be involved in a process of replacing damaged cells.

Q: Change the default content type of a custom content type in a specific node/page on specific node type I have a content type A and have a content type B related to it. Now I need to make a specific node in content type B to be always linked to content type A by default. That is, if I create a new content type B, I want that whenever I create a node in content type B, It should be automatically a node of content type A. I tried with this code:

$node = new stdClass();
$node->type = 'b';
$node->title = 'New B Node';
$node->uid = 1;
$node->revision_uid = 1;
$node->created = 1311592844;
$node->changed = 1311592844;
$node->status = 1;
$node->body = "New B Body";
node_object_prepare($node);
$node->field_caption[LANGUAGE_NONE][0]['value'] = array(

Patient-level data from the eMERGE network of US medical centers demonstrate the importance of hypertension in predicting early atherosclerosis and arterial stiffness in type 2 diabetes mellitus. Atherosclerosis is common in type 2 diabetes mellitus, including patients with early stages of disease who are not clinically apparent. Similarly, the arterial stiffness that is increasingly recognized to be a major contributor to cardiovascular risk in these patients is also often subclinical. The impact of hypertension on microvascular and macrovascular disease in the early stages of type 2 diabetes mellitus is not known. We performed meta-analyses of patient-level data from the electronic medical record-based eMERGE network to establish the importance of hypertension in predicting early atherosclerosis and arterial stiffness in type 2 diabetes mellitus. Data on 10,220 type 2 diabetes mellitus patients across 11 clinical centers in the eMERGE network were evaluated for associations between baseline characteristics, common in early atherosclerosis (including carotid intima-media thickness, plaques and flow-mediated dilatation) and arterial stiffness (including pulse wave velocity, augmentation index, and wave reflection) and baseline hypertension (defined by diastolic blood pressure >90 mmHg or systolic blood pressure >140 mmHg). Baseline hypertension was associated with carotid intima-media thickness ($P = .02$), flow-mediated dilatation ($P = .03$), and pulse wave velocity (P
