Choosing a tool The basic requirement for you to be able to edit your photos is to have the right tool. That's because the editing process itself usually changes the quality of the images you take, so if you start editing your images at the wrong time, the results could not only be bad but also permanent.

Starting out, you need a camera with a simple interface, built-in memory, and basic editing features. If you choose a cheaper camera, chances are that you'll need to invest in external memory or another piece of hardware. Also, the length of the learning curve to edit your images depends on the complexity of the software and hardware that you purchase. Different tools also have different features, and you can see why images are described as "photoshopped" when you've edited an image with a high-end program like Photoshop and then seen the same image look pixelated or grainy when you've edited it with a lower-end photo editor. In this book, you use Photoshop, but you also get to see examples of another type of image editor on the market: Lightroom.

Lightroom is a version-dependent application and is designed to be used with a digital camera. It's actually a collection of individual tools to work on images after you've taken them with your camera. This means that Lightroom is also a camera-lens transfer program, a database organizer, and a photo printing tool. ## Buying a camera For budding shutterbugs, deciding which camera is right for them is a tough decision. Choosing a dSLR isn't a straightforward decision either. The Zimbabwean Christians “being treated like lepers” Zimbabwean Christians “being treated like lepers” (Zimbabwe Christian Today – Mbanje, Zimbabwe) – In a sign of persecution of Christians in Zimbabwe many churches are under close watch. The Christian Revival Fellowship reported, quoting Bishop George Chiri from a meeting held recently with the council of bishops, “Christians in the diocese of Harare are suffering persecution like never before. The situation has become far worse in the last two years due to the harsh attitude of the regime. The community is being forced to close down churches which are still operating. According to one of our church pastors who is also a bishop, ‘the government agents arrest pastors who are conducting successful Christian meetings in their churches. Sometimes, they also demand money and confiscate all church property.’ Some pastors have been tortured and forced to confess to treason. To add to it, the Inter Church Council for Christ’s Church, of which we are members, had to close down two churches belonging to the Body of Christ Church,” Chiri was reported by Rev. Jessie Sibanda to have said. “We have also learnt that some of the parishes in Bulawayo, who belong to the Immanuel Church of Zimbabwe, have been threatened by the Zimbabwean government to close down their churches or face the wrath of the law. Despite a government of law and order, Christians are being persecuted and targeted for not conforming to state laws and regulations. The government has been targeting church leaders who are not loyal to the regime and are trying to get them removed from their positions.” “Some of our churches are being shut down in Harare. The reason cited is that the groups they were running meetings for became a security threat. However, we know that some of the groups they were running were being introduced by our government to create havoc among the opposition party,” he added. According to Rev. Sibanda, “It has become a law that, at all times, the meetings of any group, whether they are on a political platform or what have you, must have an official organisation that sponsors them. Our churches are targeted and persecuted. Two church leaders were arrested, released and then arrested again. They ended up in jail for four days before being released and forced to plead guilty to treason.” Rev. Sibanda called on all churches
