You can see in the code, I have a variable: `#response` that is getting the response from the 3rd function called `get_channels()`. I am trying to return the response back to the variable `#response`. This is what I am doing: What I am trying to do is, I want to use the method `get_channels()` in the scope of the Variable "response", so I can call it in a different method called "handle()". A: You can't just pass the result of a function to a method directly. Try doing this: `#response = get_channels()` Handle the response by creating another method called `handler` and call that method. `#response = get_channels()` response = get_channels()

handler(response)
